

The charming red elephant

One day I was in a tropical rainforest because I felt like exploring. I saw a charming red elephant. It looked tame so I tried to get on it. It took forever but I eventually got there. I was sitting on a big lumpy bone on his back and using his ears to steer him. Then he said, "That rather hurts, can you stop it?"

Just then the elephant saw the sea. He started sprinting towards it. I was telling him to run back because he was going to fall into the sea. You'll never guess what happened.

He fell into the sea. When I got out of the water I was soaked. There was no towel anywhere. I ran home as fast as I could. Then I had a nice hot shower.

The elephant got out of the water and lay on his back. He rolled around in the sand and then he ran back to his home. His mother got him to go to bed because he was extremely late home.

So if you ever see a red elephant don't ride him.

The end

BY ALEX

Year 3

Age 8

Blackville public school